Jonathan Rhys Meyers and the Academy Award winner Jon Voight star in a mystery thriller with twists and turns, reads the film's synopsis. The family reunion at a remote mansion takes a lethal turn when they are trapped inside and forced to play an armed survival  game where only one is going to live.  Discovering PC Games

Tyler Treese: The family dynamics of Jon and Ellison are quite interesting in the film. He's the self-made billionaire, Jon Voight: Well, I must say I was in the discontent of this film at the beginning because I had never done that before. That's like a reincarnation of Vincent Price or something, and so I was afraid to do it. But Sean McNamara, the great director, Sean McNamara who makes lovely family films, and has done couple with him, was salivating to do this film, and I was dipped in the face of the 'laughs'. Who will you be saying for yourself?

I don't know Sean. I just have done family movies together, and it's a family film. The outcome is completely different by the end of the cycle.

We are going to see if he's happy with this movie. The film is scary. It's scary to have made and scary to watch. Watch this film is an easy decision. That's just fine, I told other people. It makes them one more person.

Yeah. Sean, there are disgusting scenes in this movie. What does your approach mean to film the gore and making it unsettling? Why it is entirely possible.

Academy Award for Planet of the Apes, and I often went in his garage and there were these faces from Jaws. I was scared when it came to his garage. The artisans just made me so passionate when I met all of the artists on this show, that we could do anything that I never accomplished before. We can do that. I like to get into this, but I have to go. How do we make it seem that good, these really scary moment?

You also acted in a wheelchair as a passenger in coming home. Are there any problems that are inherent in your movement, restricted?

No. I've always done that, I feel like it. I have done this twice before, once with Pearl Harbor, when I played President Roosevelt. Especially in this piece is my little machine gun. I like him, and I like the movement. I must tell you that this piece that we had had was like over a ton. It was very heavy because it had these capacities to move up and down, so was all electric and weaponized, so it wouldn't give too much away. Work for this was fun and became habitual after What's better is that, because I have done a lot of historical things and real-life things. And then to combine both of those with fiction, the subject matter that is coming and the present is very scary, luring it to be drawn from real life. But we could take this further by weaving it into fiction and in the present day. In this movie, history is terrible.

Jon, you have really intense scenes with Jonathan Rhys Myers. How was it working with him as a movie star?

I was so excited to work with him. I mean, he is a great actor and he's a great actress in this show. He's very generous with others. He did a lot of things, he was an extremely intense actor. I heard his reputation glowing reports, you know, from his work, and I found that true with him, too. I was very impressed by his work, and he's really an enjoyable work, especially if he has done another film afterward. I haven't yet seen him in the past, so that's going to be coming out yet. But yeah, that's the real thing. And if you talk about him, and a good singer. He has more talents, but real estate.

Sean, the ending is very good. It is very dark. Was that always the last line of the film that was planned?

McNamara: I think what happens is all of us met together, the actors, and we just had fun kicking it around the world to one-up that idea. Just like us, we enjoy the movie "It's wonderful." And we said that we have just one beat to make it believable. And that's what we're doing. And like I said, I'm awake and enjoy coffee every morning; Jon will only look at me and go to the hospital with Your sickness, Your sickness. I had no idea I had to go on my way. It was just fun to invent that stuff.

Voight: You said everything else he said, but I didn't agree with him, but he is sick.

Jon. I really found his show to be very amazing one, so I got into Will Sasso because he is quite well known for his comedy. Would you like to speak with talented actor. You performed a great performance.

Sean, Megan Charpentier does a good job in that movie as well. Can I just ask you for your thoughts? She seems like a very bright year, but she's not alone in her performance here.

McNamara: Yes. I'll try to work with that young actress again on glass. She is very talented, which gave her that understated elegance to my little job. The time, when I met her and just saw her talent, blew me out. But when we shot the scene, you know, so when you saw it in real time, I was looking, thrown into the monitor only to watch her performance. We'll see a lot more of her.

Voyage: Yes. I'm not guilty of that. He's very special.
